Who should attend?
The Ethics, Integrity, and Civility in Higher Education conference is for faculty, staff, and administrators at the University of Iowa, University of Northern Iowa, and Iowa State University.

Why attend?
The issues discussed in this conference have major implications for academic freedom, shared governance, free speech, teaching, research, and the relationships among faculty, staff, and administration.

Breakout sessions

Learning Civility: Disenabling Bullying Behavior
- Jonathan Webb, Iowa State University, Department of World Languages and Cultures, and Student Disability Resources

Structures to Enable Civility and Integrity
- John Vallentine, University of Northern Iowa, Director, School of Music

Diversity and Civility
- Sherree Wilson, University of Iowa, Associate Dean, Cultural Affairs and Diversity Initiatives, Carver College of Medicine

Classroom Culture and Civility
- April Chatham-Carpenter, University of Northern Iowa, UNI Cornerstones Program

Faculty-Staff Cultural Workshop
- Diane Finnerty, University of Iowa, Director, Faculty Human Resources and Development

Plus discussion panels with faculty, AAUP and faculty senate leaders, and associate provosts for faculty!

Keynote Speaker:
Neil Hamilton
University of St. Thomas School of Law
Minneapolis

Hamilton, director of the Holloran Center for Ethical Leadership in the Professions, and author of Academic Ethics: Problems and Materials on Professional Conduct and Shared Governance, is nationally known for his work on academic freedom and academic ethics. Through his work in the Holloran Center, Hamilton seeks to address one of the most compelling issues facing education: How can higher education most effectively foster the ethical professional formation of each student and practicing professional?